The Colorado Cannibal.

The jury in the case of Alfred G. Packer, the San Juan ghoul, charged with murdering his five companions in San Juan county in 1872, in progress at Lake City during the last few days, rendered a verdict of guilty. The evidence shows that a party of six was organized in Utah in 1872 to prospect southern Colorado. While in the vicinity of the present site of Lake City, blinding storms coming on, they lost their way. Their food gave out, and for days together they lived on rose buds. The men, became desperate, and some crazed. While his companions were in this condition [Packer deliberately fell upon and butchered the whole party, and for several weeks lived on the flesh cut from their bodies. Thursday, in the course of the trial, Packer made his statement calmly, and for two hours he related the experience of the party from their setting out from Utah, closing with the most sickening details of the murder and subsequent feasting on human flesh, claiming that the killing was done in self-defense. The evidence shows that each member of the party, except Packer, possessed quite a large amount of money, upon which the ghoul since has been living. After nine years' wandering he was captured a few weeks since near Fort Fetterman, Wyo.

Ample Accommodations for the Knights.

At a meeting of the annual Conclave of the Grand Commandery of Knights Templar, of California, Friday, the Secretary of the Triennial Committee reported the arrangements for the coming Conclave in a favorable state of progress, and stated particularly that Eastern Commanderies need fear no lack of accommodations, as the committee will be able to provide for double the number likely to come.

Prof. Goldwin Smith has written a great deal to show that the annexation of Canada to the United States is one of the probable events of the near future, and now one Dr. Bender has undertaken to show in the current number of the North American Review that that event is inevitable. As both write from the Canadian standpoint and may be supposed, therefore, to represent the leading Canadian thought, their labors are probably intended to prepare the American mind for a hospitable reception of the Province whenever they shall get ready to enter the Union.

TUSCARORA ABOARD.

[Mining News.]

Judging from the tenor of private communications from abroad, we are led to the conclusion that our mining district is the object of much deeper consideration than is generally supposed. It is not of a sensational character, but, to the contrary, is of a quiet calculating nature that is suggestive. Everything of a truthful, encouraging character emanating from our camp is regarded with interest by those familiar with the past history of Tuscarora mining district, those who will respond to the first key-note of success. That prosperity will come to us again, no liberal-minded man who thoroughly understands the present situation can doubt; but when it will reach us is a question, at present, unanswerable. Ends and purposes are being carried out, the result of which will be magical and the effects permanent. Not only is mining reputation at stake, but the building up of the very industry itself hangs upon the efforts that are being made. Every dollar that is expended in underground improvements is placed where it will be productive of good results and the old Crockett maxim of "be sure you're right, then go ahead" actuates those who have the destiny of the camp under their control. We have been resurrected from the dead to growing importance and we now feel the beginning of the great end. We can just discern the glowing color of the coming day.

We will soon again hear the old familiar rattle and hum of the Grand Frize-Argenta mill, and when we do, our augmented bullion output will be our eulogy. Belle Isle, North Belle Isle and Independence have not yet yielded up their buried treasures and we can look forward to a season of dividends from all of them.

Mining articles are not generally guiled down without a little chewing, and we don't expect the statements made regarding this camp to be taken in without investigation. Representations of the camp are merely made to keep it prominently before the public. We want no mining boom yet. We are not ready for it. A quiet interest in our undeveloped properties is what we desire to see, and the "boom" will come at the proper time. These properties are favorably represented and mining men encouraged to take hold of them, because they are worthy consideration and merit the notice given them. They are not bonanzas, and never will become such unless the hammer and drill are brought into requisition. It is for this end we labor, for this result we shall continue to strive.

Wiggins—beg pardon—Prof. Wiggins says that the 4th July will undoubtedly be pleasant if it does not storm.—Somerville Journal.

THE PRESIDENT'S VISITORS.

Some of the People Who Called Upon Him One Afternoon.

[Washington Sunday Herald.]

President Arthur has a very direct way of dealing with his callers. Any one who has any real business to transact will never have any difficulty in securing an interview. From 1 until 2 p. m. he gives up to unofficial callers. These visitors are received in the library, a long, oval-shaped room west of the room where the Cabinet meetings are held. One day last week I sat in this library and watched the President as he passed his callers in review. He receives them all with great simplicity and directness. His manner is more that of a man of the world than a politician. He tells the plain truth to his callers. Where he can help he does. Where no hope can be given he tells the disagreeable but wholesome truth with a politeness and kindness that softens the harshness of a refusal. The President first shakes hands with the people who come to pay him merely their respects. Then he walks about and talks with his business callers, who are seated upon a line around the room. He sits down with no one. He walks up to each with a polite question of inquiry, and for the moment he devotes his entire attention to the person addressed. He has a good humor and a vein of satire in his talks with his visitors that give great variety to the interviews. He is always faultlessly dressed. The only color in his dark morning attire is a red rose in his button-hole. His manner is always polite to every one. He only becomes brusque when a request made is so manifestly improper as to be classed as impertinent.

Here are a few interview sketches taken during my morning's observations:

A lady in bottle-green arises with a black mantle over her arm. A small black hat comes down over a low forehead, while a black speckled veil half covers an ordinary, small-featured face. She whispers a request to the President who has to bow to catch her meaning. "Yes," said he, "I understand. You want me to recommend you for promotion."

"Yes, you have letters from Gen. Grant and others. I have no doubt of it. You have enough without any word from me."

"Yes, I know you have recommendations. My dear madam, I have seen cases where recommendations were piled up as high as this White House, and I could do nothing. Do you think this is a matter for me to consider? How can I know your merits?"

She still persists. "Madam, when I came into this office, out of good nature I did recommend A, B, C, and D, for promotion. Nothing came of it. What would be the amazement of my Secretaries if I should now all at once insist upon the promotion of E?"

She continues to insist, and the President is forced to walk on to get rid of her.

Here is the way a fresh office seeker meets his fate: He was a small man, who belonged to the type of men who cannot carry on a conversation with one without standing between the feet and leaning up against the man addressed. The President backed away from the man until he consented to talk at a reasonable distance. After he had related his wishes the President said:

"What you ask of me is very simple. It is only to turn out a good, honest, tried man, who performs his duty, and put in you, about whom I know nothing. Of course, I have no time for anything else but to consider just such cases as this."

The little man looks very uncomfortable, and begins a wriggling apology.

The President stops him. "I dare say," he says, "you do not like this way of putting it. It is disagreeable to you. Well, it is also unpleasant to me to be compelled to say these things. But I will not turn out good men without any reason. This may seem strange to you."

"The little man turns to go, and the President nods pleasantly to him to keep him from swooning from disappointment, as he says: "Your turn may come some time." This caller has found out something positive in one way. Early decisions make savings in hotel bills at Washington.

To one group of callers the President says: "You gentlemen come here every day to make the same argument. Perhaps if you would remain away one day I might find time to make a decision in your case. As it is you take up all the time that can be given to it with your talk."

One pale-faced young woman, with a slight black mustache shading a thick-lipped, vulgar mouth, stood up with languishing impertinence, and said a certain distinguished gentleman had told her to come to the President for a letter recommending her for an appointment in the Departments.

The President did not even look at this caller. He stood like stone as she talked. When she had concluded he said: "I never write letters recommending people for appointment in the Departments. I am not in the habit of endorsing people whom I do not know for no reason at all." This was said in a voice distinct enough to be heard by every one in the room.

To a book-nosed, sharp-eyed, gray-mustached, rotund German he said, "You were here yesterday, the day before, every day for a week. Are you coming to-morrow? What are your plans? Your case has reached a certain point. No talk can advance it beyond that point until the Secretary of the Treasury acts."

"But he is sick. I appeal to you." "I do not know one word about it. Do you want me to go to Mr. Folger's bedside and sit down with him and tell about your case?"

The German remonstrated. "What is to be done?" said the President. "The Secretary is sick. I am sorry for that. But neither you nor I can help that. You must wait until he is well. You are in the face of a misfortune, and you must grin and bear it."

"But," said the German, with a desperation almost pathetic, "I have grained for seventeen months, and can bear it no longer."

I have given the cases where refusals made cover general principles of the methods of the President. He will not interfere with the legitimate workings of the Departments. He will not turn out good men from office. He cuts short all impertinent requests, and puts every caller at once upon a plain, common-sense business footing.

THE NEW FIRST READER.

Lesson I.

[Detroit Free Press.]

It is night. A policeman awakes with a sudden start and moves around the corner, having a secret fear at his heart that he had slept through all that night, all next day and far into to-morrow night. It is night in a great city. The poker and faro rooms are in full blast, 10,000 loafers are holding down street corners, and here and there an intoxicated Alderman can be seen making his way to a policy shop or a gathering of the pavement ring. Under cover of darkness—first manufactured over 6000 years ago—the hotel beat lowers his duds from the fourth-story window; all who have dead-head tickets start for the opera houses; hundreds of young men set out to spunk; reporters fondly look forward to fires, robberies and murders, and church choirs meet to rehearse and wrangle and lay up clubs for each other.

'Tis night in the country. The stock has been fed, the squeal of the pig is hushed, and the tired horse munches at his corn and wonders why his master throws in so many cobs without a kernel on them. The watch-dog sits at the gate, perfectly willing to chew up any of the neighbors for a cent, and within the farm house all is serene, or would be if John Henry could find the grease for his boots. Mary Ann could find her novel, the old man discover the hiding-place of the bootjack, and the mother solve the mystery of how some of her neighbors managed to get a dress costing two shillings per yard, while she had nothing but calico.

'Tis night on the ocean. The proud steamer sails gallantly on and on, the captain snoring in his berth, the mates playing euchre, the lookouts asleep, and everything in readiness to swear, in case of collision, that it was all the other vessel's fault. Nothing is heard but the steady beat of the propeller, the groans of the immigrants, and the voices of men and women declaring that anybody who plans an ocean voyage for pleasure ought to be shot to death with codfish balls. The sportive dolphin gambols away his hard earnings, the whale rolls over for another nap, and the business-like shark follows in the wake to pick up any opportunities which may tumble overboard.

'Tis night on the prairie. The red men gather about the camp fire to count the scalps they have taken within the past week, and to grumble at the Government for not furnishing them port wine and repeating rifles. The white hunter and trapper curls himself up to wonder where he can find old bones for breakfast, and to realize what a fool he has made of himself, and the gaunt wolf shoulders his empty stomach and sets out in search of something to make life worth living for.

Night grows apace. In the city the weary wife takes her place in the hall with club in hand. In the country the old folks fall into bed awry with the work of the day, and the young folks spark and chew pop-corn. On the ocean the sea-sickers continue to grow worse, and the songs of the mormons fall flat. On the prairie the Indians finally decide to make war in the Spring, the hunter falls asleep to dream of eating his boots for dinner, and the wolf meets a wild-cat and offers to toss up to see which shall eat the other.

Blessed be night. But for it the burglars and gas companies would fill our poor-houses, and the morning papers would have no time to set up the matter they steal from the evening journals. Blessed be night.

A BIG POT.

How Wealthy Pacific Coasters Play Poker.

The poker "sharp" of the Carson Appeal makes this "bluff" in his paper: Just now there seems to be a healthy revival of the poker industry in the East, and the papers are full of the big bets that are made with big hands all along the Atlantic seaboard. These bets may astonish the Easterners, but they only create a smile in this section of the country, where anything less than a hundred thousand dollar pot is never considered "big." Sharon and Jones probably played for the biggest pot ever known in Nevada. It was about eight years ago, when both were pretty flush. They sat down one night in Sharon's rooms, now used as the editorial room of the Appeal and started a friendly game with a $20 ante and no limit. They won and lost a few thousand dollars when things began to warm up and Sharon said he'd go a thousand on his hand just to make it interesting. Jones lit his cigar with a fresh match and raised it to five thousand.

Sharon (scratching his head)—Ten. Jones (spitting over on the stove)—Twenty. Sharon (taking a fresh chew)—Fifty. Jones (after a long pause)—Five hundred thousand.

Sharon (instantly)—One million. Jones—I call ye. They showed down and the crowd gathered around. Sharon had a pair of deuces and Jones had a pair of treys. With big hands there's no telling what they would have bet.

A point of general interest relative to the work of the Civil Service Commission is that removals are not considered in any way under the control of the Commission. Another point is that, as the lists are public, the fact of going upon them is an assurance that a person's record is right, for he exposes himself to the criticism of the public, and to those who have personal reasons for preventing an unsuitable appointment.

Beyond the River.

Away Across the Mississippi is Held a Convincing Conversation.

"I tell you sir, that they are one of the best combinations ever produced, and my experience of that sort of thing has been wide enough to entitle my judgment to some respect."

"Oh, I don't know," responded the first speaker, "with a little yarn, as though he didn't take much interest in the subject, 'I have never been able to see much difference in those things. They are all pretty nearly the same size, and most of about the same stuff.'"

The talk of which the foregoing is a fragment, took place in Gallatin, Missouri, not long ago, in the snug office of Dr. M. P. Fowles, one of the leading physicians of the State, who followed up the vein in which he had introduced it substantially in these words:

"Nonsensical, that is the rigmarole of a boy, or rather a man who either doesn't know or doesn't care what he says. Those things, as you call them, are just as different as the moon is from green cheese. Now, liniments, lotions and ointments are good in most cases for the relief of pain or inflammation. But, in the first place they are useless. They soil the hands and the linen, besides being always out of reach when they are most wanted."

"Well, my dear Doctor," sighed the traveler from the North, "what would you have? This is a wretched world anyhow, and nothing is ever at hand when it is wanted. You can't suggest anything."

"Yes, I can," broke in the Doctor, thumping the table with his fist. "I can suggest BENSON'S CAPSICUM PAIN-EXPELLER. I have tried it on my patients, and I have tried it on myself for an attack of rheumatism, and in all cases relief has followed in from three to forty-eight hours. The old plaster is stage coach—the Capsicum is a telegraphic dispatch. For instance, in cases of Neuralgia, Muscular Rheumatism, Lumbago, retarded action of the Kidneys, and in case of need I'll buy Benson's," said the traveler, pleasantly.

THE SAVINGS BANK CASES.

April 24th the Day Set for Trial.

The Savings Bank cases were called in the District Court yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Gen. Clarke said they were satisfied that the indictments failed to cover the defective points pointed out on the previous one, but being satisfied that the matter could be used at other stages of the proceedings, no demurrer would be interposed at this time, but they would plead "not guilty," whereupon Kinkaid and Crockett arose and pleaded "not guilty." The question of time for trial was then brought up, counsel for defense announced that they would be ready in 10 days; that there were many reasons why an early trial should be had. District Attorney Alexander said he preferred that the cases should be set for early in May. The Court asked the District Attorney if there was any particular reason why request of counsel for defense should not be granted. The District Attorney said he thought the time short, but was willing to waive objections, whereupon the Judge said he would set the cases for April 24th at 10 A. M.

The Nobby Spring Clothing.

The Journal doubts if there has ever been brought to this State a finer selection of Spring clothing than that now to be seen on the counters of Abrahams Bros., at the White House. The goods displayed are, without exaggeration, as fine as any clothing made to order could possibly be, and the exquisite cloth, the stylishness of the cut and the general finish and looks of the suits are worthy of the attention of all persons desiring anything in the clothing line. Call and inspect them.

A Movement in High Life.

The San Francisco Call says: Eugene Howell, formerly of Oakland, one of the brightest and youngest members in the Nevada State Legislature, and who acquired so much notoriety in his efforts tending toward the improvement of navigation in the Colorado River, and a general favorite in Oregon society, is announced as being engaged to an estimable young lady formerly of San Francisco, but now residing in the East, the nuptials to take place early this Fall.

Sunday Closing.

The merchants of Carson City have decided to close their stores on Sunday. This is done to give the clerks a needed rest and from the fact that the Sunday custom is not worth while opening for at all. Aside from this it shows the necessary respect for the day of rest which is needed in that section.

Overdone.

Hawthorne will soon be too large for its pantaloon. Every railroad or freight train takes in an old house from Bodie, Aurora, Belmont, Grantsville, Virginia and other places. The town is full of idle men.

You can buy a first-class sewing machine twenty-five per cent. cheaper at Osburn & Shoemaker's than elsewhere in the State.

ANOTHER REDUCTION.

The Central Pacific Makes Another General Reduction.

The Central Pacific Railroad announces another general reduction in passenger fares, which takes effect today, and is of material benefit to the entire coast. The new order establishes thirty day round trip tickets between San Francisco and Truckee for $25; Reno, $28 85; Wadsworth, $32 60; Humboldt, $43 10; Mill City, $44 40; Winnemucca, $47 50; Battle Mountain, $54 10; Palsade, $59 75; Carlin, $60 75; Elko, $63 30; Wells, $69 55; Kelton, $83 55; Corianna, $90 95; Ogden, $93 65. This gives to the people of Nevada all the advantages of the late reduction to 5 1/2 cents per mile from Ogden to Truckee, as well as all round trip rates between Sacramento and San Francisco, besides the still further advantage of a through ticket by either of the three routes between Sacramento and San Francisco, thus enabling passengers to buy tickets and check baggage through to place of destination. The public can not fail to observe that these late reductions have been made with no fear of a hostile Legislature in either State for at least two years to come, and no show, so far as the Journal can observe, for an increase of business therefrom. Another big credit mark is justly due the railroad company.

THE SIRE OF OCCIDENT.

Something About Gov. Stanford's Famous Trotter.

The Stockton Independent has the following item concerning the sire of ex-Governor Stanford's famous Occident: "Ever since the wonderful horse Occident flashed like a meteor on the gaze of an astonished world, every endeavor has been made to trace his pedigree, but without avail as to satisfactory results. He was captured in a butcher's wagon first, and this fact was for years all of his pedigree that could be ascertained. The sire of Occident was foaled in this county 24 years ago, and was known as Tiger, by old St. Lawrence. Tiger was also the sire of Black Bill, Fanny Mills and other noted horses, and was considered one of the most noted stock horses on the Pacific coast. On Friday Tiger dropped dead at the Agricultural Park near this city. He died without a struggle, and will probably meet a large line of illustrious ancestors in the horse heaven. He was owned by N. C. Culver, of Stockton, formerly proprietor of the St. Lawrence livery stables, who has owned Tiger since a colt, and one time was offered $6,000 for him, but refused that sum. His dam was a mare formerly owned by Alvin Fisher, who sold her for $300. Tiger has not had a very eventful history, having never appeared on the track, and is only famous from the fact of his being sire to so many fast and famous horses."
